SPRING'S RUBAIYAT.

Come, shoot the doe, and in the fire of spring
Lay on McDuff and let the echoes ring:
The Winter League has but a little way
To flatter and the hat is on the bang.

I sometimes think that never blooms so red
The doe as when each team has southward sped;
And every youngster that the bushes grow
Comes up with laurel on his clammy head.

Ab, boy, old dog, they all look good in spring:
The Toms are there, the hating eye, the wing;
But when the showdown comes, who answers then?
Sans speed, sans curves—slack, sans everything.

Third Street M. E. Church

Revival services began very auspiciously yesterday at this Church. A large congregation attended the evening service. The Rev. H. H. Compton, who is to assist in the meetings, arrived during the afternoon and preached a very earnest and heart-searching sermon from the subject
"The Divine Pattern." He pleaded with the Church, if it had neglected its opportunities and means of grace; if the high ideal of their best experience in the Christian life had become obscured because of worldliness, that at the very beginning of these meetings they strive to return to their former high ideals.

The speaker was heard very attentively by the large congregation. He has won his way into the hearts of the people at the first service.
The singing was especially fine. A male quartet led by Mr. Edgar B. Parotte, recently from England, who is visiting his cousin, Mr.
W. F. Thomas, sang two selections, which were very impressive. Mr. Parotte has the richest tenor voice heard in Maysville in years.
It was a genuine treat to hear him. Another quartet by the Miners Douglas, Rev. Overly and Mr. Richardson added greatly to the inspiration of the service.

The meeting will continue every evening, beginning at 7 o'clock. Song services proceeding each service. Rev. Compton will preach. Come and hear him. You will be pleased with his message and helped to your better life.

BE A BOOSTER

Come Out Tuesday Night and Help Put M. B. M. Club on Its Feet

The Business Men's Club of Maysville was organized about one year since, and for some reason the business men of the city have not shown the interest in it that the movement deserves.

There is much in connection with this organization that needs attention and discussion, and a meeting of the Club is called for tomorrow, Tuesday night, at the Council Chamber.

Will not every business man in Maysville come out and bring some one else with him? It is expected at this meeting that a better organization will be effected, and if there is not enough interest shown then the idea of getting together should be abandoned.

There is about $500 in the treasury of this Club. Shall this be returned to the membership, or shall it remain as a nucleus around which to build better and stronger and thereby put the citizenship of Maysville on record as being for a bigger and better Maysville?

Mr. Business Man, are you content to pursue your own course, as has been done, or shall there be a united effort and thereby accomplish great and lasting results for this, the best community on earth?

Remember the date, Tuesday evening, March 12th, at 7:30 o'clock.

Satins of Quality 49c to $1 Yard

Their name is legion. Chiffon satin, meteor, Charmense, messaline, Venice and so on through countless variations of these glossy silks. Fashion holds satin in high favor, using it in a hundred ways to bring out its luster or to contrast it with silks of somber surface. Come in and let us show you how much satin beauty you can buy here for 59c to $1 yard.

Foulards 49c to $1.50 Yard

Other silks come and go at Fashion's ruling but foulard remains. It has developed from a strictly warm weather indoor silk to all-the-year-indoor-and-outdoor use. It will stand wear and hard usage beyond most silks, it requires little trimming, it is cool and it is inexpensive. Little wonder with so much to recommend it, women refuse to give it up. Be sure to see the attractive and varied line we offer.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Do you think the colonel injured his country by making Taft his successor.

It would be convenient if the recall could also be extended to decisions in letters.—Pittsburgh Gazette Times.

SOME of the people who are climbing into the Roosevelt band wagon are doing it because there is no other place for them to go.—Philadelphia Press.

THE feud between ROOSEVELT and TAFT has now reached the stage that they are throwing bricks at each other. And the poor old elephant is sorely troubled to know who is his keeper.—Buffalo Courier.

"The president could wreck the whole game of third-term intrigue in a single speech," declares The New York World "if he would stand up and tell the frank, brutal truth about the ROOSEVELT conspiracy against his administration."

New evidences of crookedness in business, and of political corruption arise in this country from time to time in such numbers and with such frequency as to test optimism to its very core, at the same time prompting the pessimists to repeat their oft-uttered declaration that the country is going to the dogs.

But had as the situation sometimes seems to be there has been a real betterment since the time, five or six years ago, when America waked up to the dangers confronting her and buckled on her moral armor to battle with evil.

If there is a good judge of present conditions it is WILLIAM J. BURNS, whose detective work within recent years has given him a nation-wide, even a world-wide fame. In Cincinnati a few days ago Mr. Burns made the positive statement that the United States "is a thousand per cent better than it was five years ago, mainly because the people are driving out" the dealers in corruption of all kinds.

In connection with this reassuring statement from a man in position to speak with authority The Blade is reminded of the existence of an Optimist's league in the East and of some of the reasons its publicity promoters give why country-wide optimism should prevail in spite of opposing evidence.

This league reminds us that "some 10,000 bank cashiers have worked faithfully and honestly for periods ranging from a decade to a quarter century; that 20,000,000 married couples did not seek divorces last year; that 80,000,000 people in this country have not yet committed suicide; that about every week 10,000,000 people ride on railway trains and escape injury."

This is a very partial list of facts to take courage over. It could be strikingly enlarged. Every day there is new cause for joining some optimist's league.

One of the very latest reasons was furnished Tuesday by Ohio's constitutional convention, when it adopted a proposal which assures another long step forward in the curtailment of the colossal saloon evils.—Portsmouth

ALL accounts from England agree that as food grows dearer employment grows scarcer.

Perhaps T. R. would have the Ten Commandments revised by a vote of the people.—Detroit Free Press.

WHAT Canada gained or lost through the rejection of reciprocity with the United States, is to be the subject of an investigation by a special committee of the Canadian Senate.

THE population of Australia, which is now 4,455,000, shows a gain of only 68,000 in ten years. Restriction of immigration and incessant labor troubles are responsible for this small increase.

THE Ohio Constitutional Convention is wrestling with 118 proposed amendments, which include all the radical measures bearing the label of "reform" which have been put forth during the last ten years. There may be some of merit, but probably the most of them might well be consigned to the waste basket.

If Senator Dixon of Montana had an ounce of the saving sense of humor he would perceive that his bombast about a "nationwide movement" and an "overwhelming demand" for ROOSEVELT is only calculated to make people laugh by emphasizing the enormous disparity between Mr. ROOSEVELT'S anticipations and the pitiful result.

The colonel's ill starred "hat throwing" performance has very palpably fallen flat. The anti-climax of his carefully prepared bound into the arena is almost pathetic. He risked his entire remaining prestige on the hazard of a die, and has lost already.

If the almost universal expressions of regret and disapproval (some of them from his genuine friends, like Senator Lodge) be any criterion, there is not the slightest chance for him in the convention.

Such friends see that he has lost the grand opportunity to retrieve at a stroke his moral prestige with the country by repudiating as an insult the assumption of the anti-Taft intriguers that he would break his pledge, and play false with the friend upon whom he had heaped the warmest encomiums ever bestowed by one American public man upon another.

Before this tragic blunder of his in yielding to the tempter he could have "come back" by a brilliant stroke of his own principle of the "square deal" that would have electrified the country and made even the skeptical doff their hats to him. But now—

"Not all the king's horses.
Nor all the king's men,
Could set Humpty Dumpty up again."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

His Cry for Help

By Claudine Sisson

Gordon Ascott had come up to Duck Bay from the city for the shooting. The shooting consisted of whatever could be shot. Sometimes it was a wild goose or duck—sometimes a rabbit who was reckless enough to expose himself in the open.

Mr. Ascott was twenty-five years old and something of a philosopher. He didn't expect much in this world, and he expected nothing whatever of Duck Bay. He had been told about it, and all he expected on was wading around through the marshes and getting some scenery that could not be found in town. He had never been in love, and he expected nothing of the kind from this trip. There must be women around Duck Bay, but of course they would be widows and wives. If there happened to be girls they would be cross-eyed and freckled faced and engaged to farmers' hired men.

The matter of romance didn't trouble Mr. Ascott in the least. If he got a duck he would have it roasted in the inn; if he didn't he would eat the landlord's veal cutlets. He had been in this state of mind for three days, and hadn't even seen a duck, when he thought to go further afield. The innkeeper recommended a spot two miles away where wild fowl sometimes disappeared themselves, and the hunter set out for it.

Duck Bay was a mile and a half from the railroad, and the hunter was therefore surprised to stumble upon an iron track in the contrary direction. Yes, there were the road-bed and the ties and rails, and he spent a long five minutes wondering where the line went to, and why he had not heard trains in that direction. The puzzle had not yet been solved when he took to the tracks and, after a walk of 200 feet came to a switch and a track leading into the bushes.

Mr. Ascott was no railroad man. He had never cared a copper about road-beds and ties and rails. He had always traveled in a Pullman, tipped the porter and let it go at that. Now, all of a sudden, this railroad bothered him and held his attention. Was it "Was It You, Calling for Help?" was the Duck Bay and Chicago railroad? Was it the Boston and Bunker Hill and Duck Bay line?

These queries were harrowing his brain when he moved backwards and stepped into the frog of the switch with his right foot. His weight forced the foot down, and was caught in a vice. He had on long-legged rubber boots, and of course the way to get himself free was to pull his foot out of the boot. It seemed easy, but at the end of ten minutes the victim realized that it couldn't be done. He pulled and twisted and strained and swore, but he was fast—fast in a frog, and a train might be due any minute! The engineer might see him in time to stop the train, but would he stop it if he did see him? Wouldn't he come right along and run over the captive for the moral effect it would have on other tramps?

Most men prefer to drink standing, but when it comes to thinking they would rather sit down. Mr. Ascott had to stand. Moreover, he had to be very careful about his pulse, if he toppled over it would mean a broken leg, and even then the foot would not be free. For three long hours he stood up like a telegraph pole. Every minute he expected to hear the rumble of an approaching train. Time after time he figured out how the engine would hit him, and just how his mangled remains would look as they were scattered along the track. He felt that he was a mile or more from any highway, and therefore it was hours before he began to shout. He had yelled a score of times when a young lady descended to the track from a path not far distant, and after surveying him for a moment approached to ask:

"Was it you calling for help?"
"It was," was the reply as Mr. Ascott started to lift his cap and then feared for his balance.
"And why you call?"
"I am by the foot, as you see."

"Talked with him about New York, Boston and Chicago, though she never saw these places."
"Said yes, sir, and no, sir, to him."
"Scrambled his eggs for breakfast."
"Asked him to have a third cup of coffee."
"Been dressed up every day since. Been talking about Shakespeare and Byron."
"Talks mostly to him when we sit on the veranda."
"Hain't the same girl she was."
"Won't let her mother cook any more biled dinners. Says they are piebald and vulgar."
"I am a desperate man."

"You must have been suffering all this time," said the student when the hired man was finished.
"Suffer! I'll show you how I have suffered. Listen to this. And he took the lantern down off its nail and lighted the stub of a candle and solemnly read:

"Amelia struck on the college chap, and he on her. Didn't get to sleep till an hour after midnight."
"College chap eats with a fork. I sneered at him, and Amelia gave me a nasty look."
"College chap combs his hair three times a day. Tried to joke with Amelia about it, but she wouldn't joke."

"College chap says 'thanks' when his plate or cup is handed him. I told Amelia he might be a horse thief for all that, but she said I'd better mend my own manners."
"The two were talking about a poem or something named 'Evangeline,' on the veranda last evening. I broke in to talk about hogs, and later on Amelia said it would be awfully hard to be led to a man like me."

"Laid awake and tossed all over the bed till I heard the roosters crow. That college chap had best be ware. My loving heart is not the only one that has been driven to desperation."

"Amelia still frizzing and saying 'sir.' College chap can play the organ and sing. I said he'd better be spilling fling rails instead, and Amelia wouldn't speak to me for the rest of the evening. False girl, beware!"
"College chap is too big for me to lick, but I know where I can borrow a shotgun. It can go off by accident. I tried to press Amelia's hand last night, but she wouldn't be pressed. Never slept a wink all night."

"Amelia has told me that I snore in my sleep, and that the college chap don't. She says that snoring is vulgar. More desperation!"
"This book will be found on my person. Let it be my excuse for what I am about to do. Amelia, let thy conscience be thy punishment!"

With the ending of the record Jim blew out the candle, hung up the lantern and sat down on a bag of feed and was silent.
"Jim, did you mean to shoot me?" asked Mr. Davis.
"Yes, meant to blow you all to bits!"

"Just wait here till I come back from the house."

He went to his chamber, packed his things, wrote a short note to the farmer as to where to send the wages due him and get back to the barn without being seen. Jim hadn't moved off the bag.

"Going away?" he asked as the other entered.
"Yes."
"Did you bid Amelia good-by?"
"No."
"Didn't give her hand one long, last squeeze?"
"I didn't even see her."
"And you won't come back or write?"
"Neither."

"Then—then—" said Jim as he rose and advanced. "Then—" And he kissed the college chap on the cheek and the other felt, as he headed away in the darkness, that the hired man's eyes were wet with tears.

CRITIC DEFINES WHISTLING
R. H. Schaufetter, Musical Critic, Declares the Art Should Be Encouraged.

The whistler is generally regarded as a nuisance, and is suppressed if possible, but R. H. Schaufetter, the distinguished musical critic, thinks the art ought to be encouraged. Mr. Schaufetter confesses in his recent book that he himself whistles through themes whenever he is alone. The Office Window man has never heard Mr. Schaufetter whistle, but his own personal opinion is that whistling is not adapted to whistling, being far too high-browed. The art of whistling really became lost when such tunes as "Money Musk" and the "Irish Washerwoman" passed out of common knowledge. In those old days the accomplished whistler had a trick of wobbling his tongue about in his mouth in such a way as to produce a peculiar effect of trills and harmonies that really belonged to high art. As matters are now, the attempts of an office assistant to render his favorite themes from Wagner, Dvorak, Tschalkowsky, Scharwenka and other eminent Teutonic or Slavonic composers sometimes threaten scenes of carnage and bloodshed that would put Canova to the blush if the strong hand of justice did not intervene.

An Explanation.
"Your nephew is a college graduate, isn't he?"
"Yes," confessed honest Farmer Hornbank; "but in justice to the college I'll own that he had no sense beforehand."—Woman's Home Companion.

Audubon Company Shipping Water

The Audubon Mineral Water Company has shipped a hundred cases of Audubon all parts of the United States during the past week. The water is gaining fame where ever it goes, and it will not be long until it will be known throughout the world as the most healthful drink that can be obtained. The Secretary, Mr. Charles C. Curran, has been kept busy this week filling orders, but the water cannot be bottled fast enough to fill all orders.

Sells Large Farm

The Reynolds farm on the Stony Point Pike, containing about 500 acres, has been sold by L. H. Reynolds of Little Rock, to Mr. J. T. Brock of Winchester. The farm adjoins that of E. K. Thomas and the price paid is said to be in the neighborhood of $57,000 or $114 per acre. This is one of the best bodies of land in this section of the country and is in a fine state of improvement. Eld. Reynolds has moved to Winchester where he has purchased a residence.

NOMINEE FOR PRESIDENT

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, Twice a Candidate, Now a Practicing Lawyer in Washington.

By her candidacy for the presidency of the United States Mrs. Belva Lockwood did much to focus public attention on the possibility of women holding public office and much to stimulate interest on the part of women in public affairs. Mrs. Lockwood was nominated for president in 1884 and again in 1888 by the Equal Rights party. A few years ago she was a candidate for governor of New Hampshire.

Mrs. Lockwood is a practicing lawyer in Washington. She was the first woman to be admitted to practice at the bar of the United States Supreme court. She has been very active and successful in agitating for laws giving equal property rights to women, and has taken a leading part in the woman's suffrage and the peace movements. She has gained distinction as a writer on arbitration and political and social questions.

MEXICAN BORDER WAR MOVE

Report of the Quartermaster General Put a Cost at $1,730,526.

The cost of protective measures taken by the United States along the Mexican border last spring became known for the first time with the publication of the annual report of Brig. Gen. J. H. Aleshaire, quartermaster general of the army.

From March 6, when the orders for the mobilization were issued, to the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1911, the total expense was $1,730,526.52. This is almost the grand total, for by June 30 a large part of the expense had been cut down.

For the single item of transporting troops and baggage and supplies to the Mexican border, by rail and water, from all parts of the country, $394,436.72 was expended. Approximately 16,000 men were involved in the movement. The total for transportation up to June 30, when the return movement had already begun, was $1,287,903.33. Other items were: Regular supplies, $294,527; incidental expenses, $47,956; barracks and quarters, $29,864; water and sewers, $48,402; roads, walks, wharves and drainage, $2,500; clothing and equipment, $37,461; shooting galleries and ranges, $500.

WILL DESTROY NUDE STATUE

The Famous Barney Art Creation in Washington is Now Slated for Oblivion.

J. P. S. Neill, a Washington decorator, who has been engaged to arrange the palatial home of Mrs. Alice Clifford Barney-Hemmick, announces that the statue which was supposed to have been modeled by Miss Laura Barney from the "altogether" posing of her sister, Miss Natalie Barney, is to be destroyed. For weeks it has been reported that the statue was to be placed on the rear lawn, but the neighbors were so shocked that it was taken indoors.

Mrs. Barney-Hemmick and her youthful husband have planned an Oriental garden to furnish suitable settings for worship in the Persian cult of which they became members in Paris recently.

New Dress for State Building.

The two miles of corridors and the domes of the state, war and navy building in Washington are receiving their first new dress since they were originally painted in 1875, when the edifice was constructed at a cost of $5,000,000.

The state, war and navy is one of the largest government office buildings in the world. To cover the domes and the walls, ceilings and countless pillars of the corridors it is estimated it would take one painter more than a lifetime. A gang of workmen is expected to finish the task in two months.

Light buff is the color which is covering up the blue-gray begrimed walls. After many experiments the painters believe the new hue will afford more light in the extremely dark corridors.

Vaccination for U. S. Employees.
Vaccination against typhoid fever is to be urged upon all of the 13,500 employees of the department of agriculture, in accordance with a recommendation to that effect approved by Secretary Wilson. A committee which he recently appointed to consider the subject declared itself in favor of vaccination.

MORE LIGHT
LESS COST

This is a time-proven fact—that electricity is the cheapest form of lighting when breakage, upkeep and time is taken into consideration. It is much easier to economize when you have only to touch a button than when you have to get a match, light a lighter, trim possibly adjust the burner. Let us wire your residence, store or office and we will prove it.
